

ASSESSMENT TOOL TO DETERMINE WHETHER A POSITION IS POLITICALLY RESTRICTED

The purpose of this Assessment Tool is to assist in determining whether an employee is considered politically restricted. The Political Activity Policy defines “politically-restricted employees” as employees who meet one of more of the following conditions:

- paid on the Executive Pay Plan;
- report directly to, speak on behalf of, or provide advice, opinions or recommendations to the Premier, Cabinet, Treasury Board, a Minister, or a Deputy Minister;
- have access to confidential information related to the development of government policy;
- have been delegated discretion over, or provide advice regarding, the allocation of departmental funds, especially grants to persons, businesses and other organizations;
- have been delegated discretion in regard to the provision of services to persons, businesses or other organizations; and
- have contact with the media.

This Assessment Tool can be used by employees and managers to analyze employees' current responsibilities and to consider whether their participation in political activities will impact their ability to perform their duties in an impartial manner.

Employees are also encouraged to discuss their political activities with their Manager or Human Resource representative, who may seek the advice of the Human Resource Policy and Planning Division of the Public Service Secretariat. The following list is not exhaustive, as there may be other questions used in the examination of the specific nature of the employee's work duties.
