How to Request a Settlement Conference

Instructions

A settlement conference is an informal meeting where you and the other person meet to hear each other's proposals and look for solutions that are acceptable to everyone. A judge will assist you. You can request a settlement conference if you want to negotiate a resolution and have more control over the outcome of your case. If your settlement conference is unsuccessful, you can go to trial.

Any discussions that take place in a settlement conference cannot be brought up or used against you if you go to trial. If you go to trial, your trial judge will be different from your settlement conference judge, unless you and the other person agree otherwise.

A binding settlement conference is similar to a settlement conference, except that you both agree that the settlement conference judge can make a decision. This decision becomes a final order and is binding.

Before you can file a Request for a Settlement Conference (Form F25.03A), you must already have a scheduled date for a case management hearing. A judge will consider your request at that case management hearing.

Completing a Request for a Settlement Conference

You can fill out this form by hand or you can download and fill out this form electronically at <https://www.court.nl.ca/supreme/rules-practice-notes-and-forms/family/general/> (If you fill out the form electronically, you must still print the form, file it with the Court, and serve a copy on the other person).

How to Respond to a Request for a Settlement Conference*Instructions

You have been served with a Request for a Settlement Conference (Form 25.03A). This means that the other person wants to schedule a settlement conference or binding settlement conference. At your next case management hearing, the judge will decide whether you should go to a settlement conference.

A settlement conference is an informal meeting where you and the other person meet to hear each other's proposals and look for solutions that are acceptable to everyone. A judge will assist you. You can request a settlement conference if you want to negotiate a resolution and have more control over the outcome of your case. If your settlement conference is unsuccessful, you can go to trial.

Any discussions that take place in a settlement conference cannot be brought up or used against you if you go to trial. If you go to trial, your trial judge will be different from your settlement conference judge, unless you and the other person agree otherwise.

A binding settlement conference is similar to a settlement conference, except that you both agree that the settlement conference judge can make a decision. This decision becomes a final order and is binding.

Responding to a Request for a Settlement Conference

To respond to the other person's request, you must fill out your own Request for a Settlement Conference form. You can get this form at any Supreme Court location or online:

<https://www.court.nl.ca/supreme/rules-practice-notes-and-forms/family/general/>. Even if you do not agree to a settlement conference, you must still fill out your own Request form. You can check off the option on the form to indicate that you do not agree to a settlement conference. A judge may still order you to attend a settlement conference.

Filing a Request for a Settlement Conference

You must make 2 extra copies of your signed Request for a Settlement Conference. To file your Request, bring the original Request form to the Supreme Court location where your family law file is or mail the Request to that Supreme Court location.

How to do a Consent Order*Instructions

If you and the other person have come to an agreement on all of your family law issues, you can do a Consent Order. You can use this Consent Order (Form F34.02A) template to draft the agreement between you and the other person. By signing a Consent Order, you acknowledge that the terms of the Order will be enforced. Before you sign a Consent Order, both you and the other person should get advice from separate lawyers.

You can only file a Consent Order if you already have an Originating Application (Form F4.03A), Originating Application for Variation (Form F5.05A), Joint Originating Application (Form F4.04A), or Joint Originating Application for Variation (Form F5.06A) filed with the Court. If you do not one of those documents filed with the Court, you must complete one and file it at the same time as your Consent Order.

If there are any issues that you and the other person do not agree on, you must set out these issues in an Originating Application (Form F4.03A) or Originating Application for Variation (Form F5.05A). You can still do a Consent Order on the issues you agree on.

Completing Your Consent Order

You can fill out this form by hand or you can download and fill out this form electronically at <https://www.court.nl.ca/supreme/rules-practice-notes-and-forms/family/general/> (You must still print the form and file it with the Court).

Check off “Final Order on Consent” (on the first page) if you are consenting to a final order. Check off “Interim Order on Consent” (on the first page) if you are consenting to an interim order.

Consent Orders dealing with child, spousal, partner, parental, or dependant support, must be separated from other types of orders. If you are consenting to support, fill out this Consent Order – Support. For all other Consent Orders (eg. parenting or property), fill out a Consent Order – Other than Support (Form F34.02B).

If you need more space to fill out any section of this form, attach an extra page and indicate which section is continued on the extra page.

Filing Your Consent Order

You must make 2 extra copies of your completed and signed consent Order. To file it, you must bring the original Consent Order to the same Court location where the Originating Application, Originating Application for Variation, Joint Originating Application, or Joint Originating Application for Variation was filed. You can also mail the Consent Order to that Supreme Court location.
